AREA DATA

Nestled in the heart of the Nicola Valley, Merritt (population: 7,000) offers an active and unique lifestyle amid the incredible scenery of British Columbia's southern interior. Wind erosion has created unique formations in the walls of Windy Canyon near Merritt, and ancient shorelines of 10,000-year-old glacial lakes are visible in the surrounding grasslands where cattle graze undisturbed. Located 278 km (168 mi) from Vancouver, Merritt's rolling hills and cattle ranches, resort lodgings and fishing lakes combine a rich culture and history with outdoor adventure.

You can stay at a ranch that preserves the cowboy culture and history of Merritt and the surrounding Thompson Okanagan region. Douglas Lake Ranch is a working cattle ranch, Canada's largest, that offers fishing on one of their 11 private lakes.

A-P Guest Ranch has buildings that are originals of a 1911 homestead ranch, while Quilchena hotel and ranch offers unique accommodation in a period-style house.

Merritt's ranching tradition is carried on at rodeos held throughout the spring, summer, and fall. Most of these rodeos feature professional competitions, but several are designed for youth and high school students.

RECREATION

From the property there are countless miles of logging roads and various other trails to explore on horseback, on foot, by ATV or snowmobile. ## HISTORY

For years the Merritt area was used as a gathering place by local settlers First Nations groups and a transportation route by early pioneers. The grasslands eventually drew the attention of settlers interested in ranching, and the first ranches were staked in the mid-19th century.

In the 1880s three ranches located at the confluence of the Nicola and Coldwater Rivers, owned by William Voght, Jesus Garcia and the John Charters Estate, became the focus of a farming community known as "The Forks." With the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway through British Columbia in 1885, interest increased in the coal deposits south of The Forks.

Part of the ranches owned by Voght, Garcia and Charters was surveyed in 1893 for the townsite of Forksdale, but the name did not catch on with locals. Instead, the name was changed in 1906 to honour William Hamilton Merritt, a mining engineer and railway promoter. By 1907, the coal mines were in operation and with the completion of the railway from Spences Bridge, government and other offices starting moving from Nicola west to establish Merritt as the major settlement in the Nicola Valley.
